Foxhall Row houses are located in a transit-oriented Traditional Neighborhood Design community just west of Portland and adjacent to a light rail station. The heart of the community is a mixed-use Town Center with shops, restaurants, coffee shop, service businesses, and a small grocery store, all within a five-minute walk. These elegantly styled classic row homes appeal to young singles, couples or empty nesters. The row homes are not isolated from single-family homes but are integrated into the community so that Foxhall residents can interact easily with the rest of the neighborhood. Most of the homes are plotted on parks projecting a definite presence in the community. The three story homes are built with entrances a half-level above the street and living rooms one-and-a-half stories high to enhance the feeling of spaciousness inside and improve accessibility to the streetscape outside while also providing privacy for the living areas. Plans range from 2 bedroom, 2 ½ baths up to 4 bedroom, 3 ½ baths with optional loft/bedroom and basement/junior suite options, all with direct two-car garage access.
